Senior A Honor Roll

With a perfect record of straight A's for their seholastie work at North Central, Mary Barrett, Alice Oatman, Kobert lBerg and Raymond Keller liad the Senior A honor roll of 72 students.

Never before in the history of the scherol have so many students attained such a high seholastic rating. To be on the Senior A honor roll, students must have at least an average of 13 during their entire high school career.

Jean Ferguson, with the splendid average of 3,96 , ranked second. Orise Watson, Stanley Hughart and John MeCrackin, having averages of 3.93 , tied for third place.

Out of the first eight positions of the list there were four boys and four girls.

The grades atre rated: A, four points; B, tirree; C, two; D, one. One F would keep a student off the list. The honor roll in order of ranking is:

Hear ye! Hear ye! Hear ye! All persons having anything to cto before the Itomorable, the Justices of the Superior Court of Ciraduation in the first session thereof now sitting in North Central within the City of Spokame. draw near and give your attendance and you shatl be heard: God sawe the Students of North Central."
Thons hegan the trial of Mr. Senior A. Class, defendant, ws. Thirty-two Credits, plaintiff, sin that memorable day of $A$ pril, 1936 . The presiding judge was the Honorable Freteric (i Kennedy, and the jury was composed of to twachers, with Mr. 'T. O. Ramsey as foreman. After two months and four days the lawyer's phea for the defendant was read before a tired body of bewildered students and terrified teachers.

The pleas:
I. AWYER'S PINE. 1 (Defendant)
"Your llonor, and Gentlemen of the Jury: If you have followed the testimony given in this case with the attention that is due its importance, no words of mine are needed to convince for that the defendant has been mojustly aecused of not being worthy of his diploma.
"For four long years he has struggled to absorb that which was for his own good, and he has done it. lmagine for a moment the great obstacles loe had to overcome-unsympathetic teachers (they just wouldn't let him (heat in his tests), hard subjects and the 'panges of despised love.' Y̌et he vaulted over them all and now . . .
"Gentlemen of the Jury, I ask you: What hats my client ever done to deserve such a fate as this? l.et me here take time to state hriefly: the facts behind his four years' stay in this institution. He came here as a drowntrodden freshman, hardly dry behind the cars - an innocent that he knew nothing Dase-why, he was honor personified! Then in his sophomore year, his avoirdhpois was increased considerably ly some extra weight from Havermale, find he began to take an interest in sehool activities. He even distinguished himself (in a very small way) in school contests.
"lmagine this honest young man going patiently about his tasks each day hopefully cramming for tests, stadying his lessons dili-grotly-now lifted up to sublime heights of fnthusiasm-now sunk in the mire of misery: Burt he proyressed!
"Then in his jmior year he forged ahead rogardless of the careless, criel, calculating Seniors who crowded his ehance for development. Yet he developed, and those shining tamples of his deselopment hlossomeel forth in the bebate team. Those worthy members were 13oh Berg, Mary Barrett, Bill Lewis, Merrill Read, I rnim Knaack and Ray Keller.
". 1 fter three years of toil and hard labor, and after many ineffectual attompts to win great honors, be became a mighty Senior, It was then that he blossomed forth in full Hoom. During his Senior is semester an election of officers took place and the four B's cmerged. Bill Herrington, president; Bruce Lik, viee-president; Don Breeden, secretary; and Ray Boyd, treasurer.
". Igain in the Senior $I$ semester, another election for class officers took plaee, and three of the positions were filled hy former Senior 13 offieers-those being: 13ill 11 errington, president: Don Breeden, secretary: and Ray Boyd, treasurer. The other offiees were eapably handled by Eiva Lu Kilhan, vice president; Walter Bablitt, sergeant at arms; Lawrence Angell, yell leader, and not to be forgotten, that great exponent of oratory, Bob Berg. elass orator. What more could my client give to a school in the way of eharacter:
"1)idn't the student body show great confidenee in my elient's leadership ability when it solected as president of the Boys' Federation, Bill Herrington, and president of the Girls' 1.eagre, Nlice Oatman?

Bon Voyage to the Class

You，the members of this preat class of June，1936，are leaving the familiar scenes at North Central．Vour standing and privilege as undergraduates will soon be gone；already others are crowding forward to take your places．

The experiences you have enjoyed here，the frienth you have made，the learning you have gainet，the new outhooks and attitudes are all a part of your education．It is hoped that your attachment luers and all that it has done for you will give grou a determination to continue to take part in educational opportunities－not necensarily colloge，though for those who can afford it and really profit by it，further study in organized sehools shoukd be planned．Sut all of you can take part in worthy social activi－ ties in your commanities，can seek and enjoy grood reading．pookl plays and music，and cul－ tivate an intellectual curiosity alout things in in the world misout you．These are elucational opportunities which should be more surely and easily your for having been students in North Central high schomol．

But what about the joh：Yes， 1 know that is certainly neces－ary，if not now，in due time for yon all．＇There is as much work in the world toxlay as arer；its uature is changing almost from year to sear．Your high school training perlaps cannot give you a paying job but it certainly shouk have prepared you in many ways to hold one once you have it．Employers now，as never hefore，want honesty，loyalty， willingenes tuwork，promptness，courtesy，alert－ ness and intelligence．You larve all those quali－ ties but not all to the：same degree．Can foon recall high schosil experiences designed to atrengthen them：＇That is what any form of goore education shemld do for you．Whether you continte to work for someore elace or later conee ta be your own lxas，those qualities will tetermine your sncees－thone phas an interest in the success and happiness of those around you．

Sincercly yours．

"Fog"

Finstr I'mæぇ: Story
1;y Fillen Lezcis

Stealthily, silently, ghostly the for seeped and swept through the streets, swallowing up the leary din of the traffic and black buildings of the hage city. Inexorably it flosated, wafted through the city-a soothing, a terrifyinge, a stifling thing.

Sarah logan sat quictly in a lounging chair, her white lair gleaming under the soft light of a lamp. She sat with her hands calmly folded in her lap, watehing her granddaughter Jane as she paced restlessly baek and forth across the roon, first picking up a magazine. throwing it down-pacing, pacing. The for seemed to oppress her-and Sarah sat remem-bering-the hoarse bellow of fog horns, the pounding of surf, the piercing, heart-rending eries of women athd sle, Saralh, standing apart, lips tightly compressed, chilled and numbedknowing that he would never come back. Fof, fog! A mereifur oblivion-and then Sarah and her daughter Helen facing a bleak gray world. Work had bern a welcome solace-work and Helen. The great coast city thundered on, fog often veiling its activities for days on end. Fong-a torture almost beyond endurance for Sarah; yet in that great misty gray sea she seemed to be nearer Neil. The fog had hecome an almost welerane torture-and then as it must always he, time softened the eruel pain, leaving a misty dream.

Sarah sat remembering, nodding, memories carrying leer into a seceret world of her own in which she had lived for some forty years. She was brought abruptly out of her dream by Helen.

IIelen stood by the window, staring fixedly: at nothing, her face contorted by a look of loathing. She hated fog! She moved restlessly as Jack rattled a newspaper. Irritably she moved away from the window. Jack, every-one-scemed to make a specinl effort to irritate her, Jane insisting on going aut with men sle didn't approve of, Jack unconcerned over her welfare, engrossed in his husiness, never praying any attention to her-selfish! Jane so worldlywise, going on wild parties, sophisticated-; even Mother, nlways so wise-alway's so maddeningly right: llelen hated the apartment, bated the furniture-everything was horribly ugly, stifling, tuffy, and fog! It choked her. A wisp of fog floated into the room through an apen windas only to he swallowed up instantly by the heat, hut to 1 felen's fevered imagination it reached out for here pursued her. choked lier -and with a hysterical sob she rushed from the romm -

Jack put down his newspaper and looked after Helen. Ife wondered what was wrong with her she had been acting cqueerly lately, changed complotely couldn't get along with her at all anymore Maybe going out too much. She was (.ften like this lately - prohahly be all right in the morning. Jack settled back in lus chair and sighed. This was the kind of a night he liked. Warm inside, comfortable, and let the rent of the world go hang. Fog always gave him such at restful feeling. cut off the rest of the world. made the hard grueling day at the offiee distant. Yeot business was getting bet-ter-made a big deal texlay; (onght to be a promotion for it . Things going along swell if Helen would only behave herself, Queer how she detented for almost nonsensical, Should have better control of herself than to let her disliken get the beetter of her. Ife sat up suddonly, a sense of foreborling - Jame had left the apartment -

Jane tramped on the starter-the car leaped forward. the fog swepping by. Anything to get out of the apartment, to eseape that stifling romm. She rolled down the windows and gulped down the frewh air, striving to "vade that intangible force that made leer want to writhe and scream- (irandina $L$ agan forever living in the past-Dad and Mother harely speaking to vach other strangers; Jane stepped on the accelerator. Tlue fog grew inore dense but Jane wheredingly and recklessly sped by the traffic into the opeon rold along the hay. Fverything had hecone ou utterly stale, uninteresting, unbearably boring. Datn sneered-"This sophisticated age" - Vother listened anathetically, Grandma $L$ oggan noxded wisely yet so abstract-1.:-Jane reiched for the dial of the car radio, searcherl for music, found some, settled back, relaxing her teased muscles. 'The fog came by in great sweeps and suktenly Jane had a feeling of utter weariness and resignation-a peace that came as a resilt of a long drawn out battle, mentally, physically, spiritually against ene's own emotion's. She drove on, the fog giving her a sense of utter detachment; unconsciously, she forced the car faster and faster. The music played on, on-until the drums, the throb, the pulse of it seemed to lecome a part of leer, pounding, pounding dada da-da-da; on, on, the car pressed forward fifty, sixty,-serenty; a sudden dip into a small valley, a solial bank of white fog, a screech of brakes, a crash-a swirl of fog-then a great ulisty gray sea of white nothingness.

The telephone jangled Jack snatelved it, listened, turmed a pasty gray; Helen came from the ledroom, eyes swollen, heavy lidded, intuitively knowing; Sarah Iogan sat quietlyand the fog stealthily, silently, ghostly, seeped and swept the streets.

"Poverty's Garret"

Srcond Prize Story

By Earl Sickles

The rickety stairs squeaked and groaned as leeavy footsteps lunbered slowly upwards. Papa Joluann sat down on the last landing to rest. His hreath came in great gaspls, and drops of glistening sweat stood out on his forehead. Even young men tired quickly on these stairs, and Papa Jolunn was no longer young. After a few moments he rose and climbed the last two steps to the large oaken door of the garret. Fumbling in the semi-darkness, he at last inserted the key into the rusty lock, and the door swung open.

The room was a large one, a roof garret. Papa Johann shivered as the damp, chill air bit through lis thin clothing.
"Aclı! Soch a room, soch a room!" he exclaimed as lee stumbled over a piece of old carpet, and struck the shaky table.

In the darkness he struck a match along the bare wood floor. Papa cradled the flame in his hands, and lit the stub of candle that protruded crazily from the old vinegar bottle. As the flame flickered higher and higher, the room brightened. 'Iall, lanky shatows clanced on the wall in misshaperi forms. The large, humped shado: that stretched up out of sight on the ceiling narrowed down to the stooped figure of the old man who stoorl warming his hauds over the meager flare of the candle.

Papa Johann was a frail little creature, with a long. thin nose, and blue eyes that were sure to have a twinkle at all times. His silver hair brushed out shoulder lengtle, was covered with a black fedora. His shoulders were bent, perlups from hard work, perhaps from poverty. But what was poverty to lim? He was rich. lle had music too feed his mind and soull What else could le ask for?

He looked about the room, sluddering at its grim ugliness. Crossbeams showed everywhere, and great clunks of plaster dropped occasionally from gaping loles in the wall. In one corner of the garret stood an old cot, with a torn, ragged blanket covering the mattress. beside it was a small dresser, painted white, and mirrorless. Almove this was a cuploard, small and bare. (On the other side of the room were two large French windows that stretched from floor to ceiling. 'They were blank and curtainless. Beside the windows was Papa Johamn's belowed pianoforte. What a homey, comfortable atmosphere it gave to the poor roon! It was beautifully polished, without a seratch or mar nem its gleanning surface, a priceless treasure for some autigue collector.

Papa Johana sat down on the old stomb, and his fingers wandered ower the keys.
"P'apa Johann, Papa Johann," cried a voice, as someone chattered mp the stairs, and burst thromgh the deor.
"("arolis, vot iss it, vot iss the matter?" he cxlaimed delightedly as he jumped up to meet her.

Carola flung lursself into his arms, and squeczed him very tightly. Then she tork him by the lands, and swung linn around, and around until lee was quite winded and dizzy. At last he managed to stop her, and asked all out of breatl, "Vot iss it? T'ell me vot it iss that should make you se happy."
"Oh P Papa Johann, I have some goond news for your."
"Ya, 1 know. I should lave gathered that from all the yelling so."
"I have a joh) for you, P'apa Johamu."
"A job for me?" 1'apa Johann didn't know what to say: He sat down in the rickety chair, and pulled Caroln to his lap. Two large tears trickled down each elecek. He lifted Carola's chin and looked into her dark haunting eyes, set off to advantage by the high cherkhones of her beautiful Slavie face. Carola's full name was Carola Auna Evreinoff, but no one had ever heard it. It was to lo. sabed for the thme when she would be a great opera singer. Sle was singing "llot Cha" songs at Tomi's it wasn't much, hut it gave her enough money to continue her singing lessoms. I'apa Johann ran his fingers tenderly through her dark wayy luar.
"You did this for me?"
"Of course 1 did. It isn't inuch, It's at 'Toni's. He said if you were good, he would let you play your wal'zes to his patrons every night. I must be going. 'Ioni will be angry if I am late agoin tonight. Goord-by, 1 will come in tomorrow morning and tell you all about it."

She blew hion a kiss as she left. The candle flickered out as sle slammed the door behind her. Papa Julamn didn't seem to notice, but sat in the dark, murmuring to himself, "They shall bear the great Richard Johamn play again. 'lhey vill say great things about my valtzes. Richard Joliann vill no longer be just a ghost in the nemory of the people; he vill live again."

Slowly le got up and walked over to the piano. Mellow moronlight floated through the windows, and liis silver hair gleamed in the pale light. Soft melonlies echoed through the romm fronn his magical lands. The drab garret faded and disappeared. Onee more he was the waltz king. 'The great chandelier in the center of the Grand Duke's concert room glittered and sparkled. Papa Johann was playing his grent "(iypsy Suite", and everyone was cheering hin. The full sympliony joined in, and the "Crand Suite" drew to a close in a burst of glorjous triumph. 'The Duke was forgetting to be merely polite, and her Royal Highmess was throwing her roses to P'apa Jolann. Once more the great Johann had hrought royalty to its feet. As the last chorl thimned out into silence, discords of reality broke the spell, and ркоr Papa Johann dropped his head and arms on the keys and sobbed.

It was nine-thirty by Carola's wateln as they stord waiting in the wings at 'Ioni's eabaret.
"Are ÿou ready, Papa Joham?" nsked Carola excitedly.
"Y", I an ready". Papa's eyes sparkled. He was ready for the great moment.
'The drunken yelling, the climking of glasses, the insintent supping of soups, all stopped as l.e walked out on the stage and bowed. Ah, how niee he loroked! Ilis ancient evening suit hal been removed from the hulging suitcase and was now shining in all its glory. It was a hit old fashiened, ferhaps: but it was the hest lu* liad. His hair had been smoothed down, and his string tie had been earefully arranged by Carola.

As he bowed again, someone sniggered, and the silence broke. Cries, "boos," catealls, and hissess echoed :round the hall. I'oor Papa Jolatn was lewiklered. Looking this way and thatr, as if trying to eseape, he suddenly spied the piano. The sight of the fanniliar instrument reassured him; he mate his way hlindly to it, seeking refuge from the din about him. He lifted his hands, started to play one of his waltzes. After the firnt few hars the crowd, quicted for an instant, started an even more furious uproar.
"I say, lablyl. Where have I seen that fellow anked Boh Symns, the famous publisher from 'Tin-l'an Alley, of his friend, Ralph Forbes, as they sat at one of the tables in the corner. "llis face looks familiar."
"I don't know, Symns, but l'el like to take a pooke at some of these drunks. Tlwy've got the poor little fellow seared stiff. That's a pretty little tune he played, too. There be fres. I oook at him duek out the back door!"
"No, wonder it's a 'pretty little tune'," exclaimed Symms. Do yon remember my telling vou about rewing Riehard Johann in Berlin when I was a kid? ?
"Sure, you"re always bragging almout how Sen saw the great composer. What of it?"
"Nothing at all; only IRichard Johann disappertred after the death of his wife. This man is Richard Johann! Come on. We've got to find him."

Poor Papa Johann ran till he could run no more. Llis eyes were bloodshot, his nostrils tensed white as the air tore through them. He ran blindly into posts and buildings. The blink-

Mrs. R. M. Pratt, Mrs. Kenneth Jones, and Mre. I.. F. Iittle, the wiven of three Minnesperlis financial leaders. Were, between bits of datinty sandwiches and sips, of tea, diserussing a weighty subjeet. It least it Wan as weighty as could be expected whon there were so many othe: fascinating things they were just dying to tatk abont, sueh as the tashions and how Mrso leasdate always won their perkof bunces at bridge games, and jut how Sara Martin managed to stay so stim. The weighty sulyect under dicelnssion was. The Vers Best Prouple.
It had alt started when Mrs. Pratt had waid. after carefully selecting a tunafish canape. "Oll. girk, (bach listener was fat and at least forty) gucos the latent. Joan's engagoment to Ronald Blake is all but announced. You know for a time 1 was a bit worried about Joan. She always pieks up with the strangest people. llowever, that is ower, and for goxkl, theause she is really serions about komnie and she's wearing his ring: and, well, you know, Ronnie is one of the very beat people."
l'ale litthe Mrs. Jomes mormured, "Inn't that nict:"
Howerer Ms. Iditte, who wath of a more woluble nature beeame inmediately sympathetieally interested, "Darling, that's superb. There's nothing like being sure. After all. there really is a great difference between those of the inferior clasmes, and, wetl, the very beet people." Behind her at deer closed suftly, but Mrs. 1 ittle, failing to hoar it, rattlect on. "One can actuatly tell a member of the working class ju-t by looking at him. There is at rertain look that lue never fails to have. 'Take Pour inatid for in-"

A roice at her elbow broke in, "Woukl you care for a cookie, madam?" It was the voice of an infuriated girl trying desperately to maintain self control. Though this girl was only: Mrs. Pratf's maid, she had heard Mrs. Little's words and they had cut to the quick, Vaguely she heard Mr.. Bratti, request to elcar the tea table.

Blinded with teare of injury and anger, sle meelsanically watked as if werxlen, baek and forth between the dining room and kitehen. It Was like Mrs. Pratt to request her to stay at home until three, on her afternoon out, in urder that Mr, Pratt's fine guchts might be served tea and wafers, guests who were so fine and weathy that they could say unkind tl inge aud stilt be considered cultured. Oh. how we envied them! Their lives, pleasant, eass. well requlated, were spent in partors. She would spend her life in kitehens. That was it, parlum for the very best people; kitelens for the underdoges.

Her hands in the sapy dishwater felt warm and relaxed. . 111 defianee left her but the hurt romained. Slowly tears began to drop into the dish p.on. She thought as she looked at the red work-worn hatud, wound around the dainty blue eream pitcher, of how smooth and white it ancl to be. Her mind wandered baek to the night of bar graduation from the small town high scluol in Clinton. That night she had playerl a piano wolo. Sle remembered how bowly her handa luad lewked as her fingers rippled wer the keys. She could remember ats if it were restertay, the proud faces of ber mother and father. Her father and lonked oeld in his new black suit. He should always be sech with a bammer in one hand and a safe in the other. Thes were the implements of his trade and they suited him. He had wanterl 1 er to go to college but doctor bills had to be patid, and so now she was washing dishes and merppong floor for a living. It was unfair. unjust.

Mcehaniealty- (Cara hung up the tea towel and walked up the stairs to her bechrom. As she passed Joan I'ratt', bedrom, she thought how much she emved and hated this lowely, gay twents year old girl.

Like a machine she entered her romom, bathed, and dressed.
boor an hour she watked the down town streets. She harl nothing to do, no plafe to go, for slie had no friends. Clara was too proud to associate with the other servant girls with whom she came in contact，and Joan Pratt and her friends wonld rather have touched so many smakes than to be seen in compang with just an ordinary servant girl．

As she passed in front of Vounge＇s restaurant it oceured to her that she had always wanted to eat a meal in this placer，whieh was very obviously frequented most often by，let us say， ＂the very leest people．＂She looked into her purse．There were exactly meventy－fise cents and a street car token．She ought to be able to fert something for that amount，and at lenst she woulal have the fun of eating ad ＂oung＇s．

Clara selecterl a shall booth and sat down． ＂lhen that horrible indifferenee whieh bat montentarily eleared，returned and she ordered carelessly，noting only that leer dinner was costing her fifty cents instead of seventy－five．

Tow engronsed in leor own thonghts to motiere thut a masculine figure had seated himself opposite her．she was startled to hear him make several casual remarks，apparently for her benefit．Idly，she noticed that his hands were well grombed and that he wore an un－ usually fine ring．His voice continued，quiet， and sympathetic．

Surdenly Clara was corying．How it happened alae Hever knew，hut she found lierself on the sidewalk，weithly giving her eonsent to this man who was a perfect stranger to take a car ride．Dully Clara thought to herself，＂What doce it malter？Besides，l＇m lonely，and I want human companionships．＂
llir foot wric already on the ramoing lmard when a wave of common sense came flexpling ower ler．Suddenly，it wemed very necensary for her at loant to louk carcofully at the man Whase car she was about to enter．

She losked 世р．l＇uzalement，then slow recog－ nition filled luer face．＂Why．，you＇re＂Clara begath to laugh，Her little world of false ralues tumbled about her．It was the dawn of a bew day for Clara．

Her would－be host＇s face was a picture of ：matmemont and einbirassment．

He faltered，＂Iren＇t you going to get in the car？＂
＇Ilarough peals of lasppy lauglater Clara answered him．＂No．13ut thank you again and again for tha：otfer．It in probably the kindest thing you ever did．I know it is the loest thing that ever lappened to me，because at last 1 know the true wortlu of kitehens and parlors－ Mr．Romald Blake．＂

Senior Dramatics

"Romeo and Juliet," Shakespeare's romantic tragedy, presented ly the senior dramatics class May 22 and 23 , proved to be not only the most ambitians. but aloo the most successful production malartaken by Grace Douglas Leonard during her career at North Central.
lhot: The story of the star-crossed lovers of Verona whose love blooms, ripens and is plucked within a week. Shakespeare's characters and poetre make it a clrama of exquisite beanty:

Claracters: Romeo, Juliet, Mercutio and the Nurse are four unforgettable portraits by Will Shakespare. In the title roles, Ray Keller, Dorothy Serley and Jemn Hinton brought the lovers laek to lifc again . . . impetuons radiant youths, experiencing their first spring and their first lowe. Contrasting, was the low-hrow and Lovable Nurse, with Mary Barrett and Lucille Anderson making the most of a choice role.

The part of the rollicking, effersescent Mercutio was done by Bill 1 ewis.

Other outstarding performances: Bob Berg H: Capulet and Earl Sickles as Tybalt.
Prexluction: Costumes and scenery were in semi-anthentic sixternth century styles. Many of the designs u-ed were from original sketehes of the member, of the senior dramatics class. The setting, which was of the unit type, was designed by Raly Keller. Additional art work wais done ly the members of the art department with Jeanette K (sll directing the work.

The pageantry and coloring of the costumes, in capturing the moorl of Rennaisance Italy, was a laghlight of the presentation.

Pri-Stanon (inmes

Ifter administering a somed drubbing to the Leardan team, the Indians took to the warpath on their Wratehee trip. "Ihe first team met was $\mathbb{J P}^{\text {enateher, whom they took into camp }}$ to the tume of $2 \cdot 2$ fo 14 . 'The nest night, however, the lieckeluls experienced a little difficolty and finished on the small end of a ati to $20^{2}$ seore with the ('helan Gisats. I'ine City', by means of a brilliant rally, were able to overconne an ladian lead and come out on top by a soore of 2.5 to $\because \underline{2}$ in the noxt game the Braves plaved.

Flashing at fast loroaking offense and a closechecking defense, the Redskins went to town against Creston high schoel and came out on the long end of a 11 to 19 senre. In their remaining four gromes, the lied and l3laek aggregation broke ceen, taking the messure of Chewelah and Cheney, and losing hard fought contests to Coner d* Alone and Bonners Ferry:

For the entire trip, the Indians mide 249 prints to their epponents 196.
Tur: Ifwis Ann Clark Simifs

In the four games lectween lewis and Clark and North Contral there was little, if anyo, advantage one way or the other. "The Braves amassed $9: 3$ points in the series to the 'Tigers' 96.

A desperate rally by Coach 'loylor' proteges failed in the first fame and the Orange and black five managed tor come ont on ton, 19 to 14. I last mimute basket ly a Tiger gave Lewis and clark another victory in the serond game, 27 to 25.
'The third elash was a seesaw affair throaghout, with the Inclians in the lead mont of the time. Pnlling horseshoes from their porkets, lowever. th:e Ilnintermen tied the game at the enel of the regular intermission time anel went on in the overtine to win on two free threws, 24 to 22.

In the last game, however, there was no douldt as to which was the sumerior team. The Wharrior fiowe took the lead immediately and urver relinguished it. 'Ihe championship I a wis and Clark five was never able to cope with the fast offenme alld close-checking defense of the Taylor squid.

A calandy crowd of ladian rooters were on hame to ser their team climax the seasom with $n$ sconational victory.

With a whirlwind attack, the Redelads howitzered in shots from all positions to take the measure of the (ionzaga Bullpups. 3f to 16 . In ther other three clashes with the toy I3ulldogs. the WFarriars just couldn't get going and went down to dofeat bey scores of 19 to 11,40 to 36, and 2n io 18.

The Rogers games were different, however. A fighting Reclakin team that never gave up defeated the llillyard lads three mames out of four. "llee first game was won by North Celltral by the morgin of one point. Rogers took their lone contest from the Braves in the second fracoss, 21 to 13 . Smothering the 1 'irates in the list two games, the Warriors made 62 counters to 12 madle by IRogers.

All in all the Warriors made 55y points in their 23 games to their opponents 189.

A colored preacher at the close of his sermon diseovered one of his deacons asleep. He said: "We will now have a few minutes of prayer. Deacon 13rown, will you lead?"

Deacon Brown sleepily replied: "Lead? I just dealt."
"Hello," called a feminine voice over the phone. "ls this the humane society?"
"Yes," replied the official in charge.
"Well, there's a book agent sitting out here in a tree teasing my dog."
